Another Day, Another Partnership; ARAKODA's Market Access Expands

Our key takeaways from the announced partnership with GoodRx:

- The GoodRx partnership is a shrewd method of lowering patient out-of-pocket costs, while simultaneously increasing the product's availability, in our opinion.
- We believe this announcement should inject another welcome measure of visibility and access to the therapy potentially accelerating revenue growth from this product, while providing additional upside to the stock.

GoodRx partnership further expands ARAKODA's accessibility. This morning, 60 Degrees disclosed another partnership seeking to expand access to ARAKODA. The new agreement with GoodRx (GDRX; not rated), which is slated to begin immediately, allows patients to use the GoodRx platform to search and purchase ARAKODA nationwide. GoodRx has access to over 70,000 pharmacies in the U.S. and provides discounts to eligible prescriptions, including ARAKODA. We believe this initiative between both companies not only improves ARAKODA's affordability (a potential hurdle for new ARAKODA patients), but it also bolsters the company's ARAKODA marketing approach adding to existing partnerships and strategies. We believe this collaboration, in combination with previously announced partnerships, should help accelerate sales and revenue generation from ARAKODA throughout 2026.

Agreement with telehealth platform seeks to increase ARAKODA's viability and access. Recently, the company announced a market access partnership with Runway Health (private). The partnership's goal, beginning April 2, 2026, is to expand pre-departure access to ARAKODA (also known as tafenoquine) for international travelers through the Runway Health travel medicine platform. Runway Health is a direct-to-patient telehealth platform connecting travelers to physician-led online consultations before traveling to regions of the world where exposure to certain illnesses or vectors, (e.g., malaria), are more common. This partnership adds a new pillar to the company's ARAKODA marketing strategy, where eligible users can match their travel itinerary with a personalized medical treatment plan designed by a U.S. licensed healthcare provider.

ARAKODA sales have trended upwards since entering the market; we see plenty of room to grow. ARAKODA experienced has year over year (YoY) sales growth in recent years. For example, in FY23 net product revenues for ARAKODA was $253.6k. In FY24 net product revenues increased 140% to $607.6k. In order to continue driving future sales of the therapy, 60 Degrees is working to: 1) increase awareness of the product, 2) conduct physician outreach, 3) work with payers and pharmacies to reduce out-of-pocket costs, and 4) expand tafenoquine's use in other indications, including babesiosis. We await additional visibility from these initiatives as well as their success towards increasing revenue generation. In the meantime, we remind investors infectious disease is a large and growing market with a paucity of effective therapies on the market or in development. We view this gap as an underappreciated opportunity for the company and progress on these fronts could have significant potential upside for the stock in the near term.

Valuation and risks to price target achievement. We reiterate our Buy rating and our $24 price target. Our price target is based on our clinical net present value (NPV) model, which derives its value from 60 Degrees' lead asset, tafenoquine, for babesiosis in U.S. only (100% contribution; 18% PoS). Due to a lack of visibility and current revenue generation in the malaria market, we do not include sales of ARAKODA in our estimates yet. Key areas of future potential upside are based on four main factors: 1) securing further partnership agreements to develop pipeline in both U.S. and ex-U.S. markets; 2) achieving approval in additional indications; and 3) adjustment to projections factors, including chance of success and peak sales. Risk factors that could impede the stock from reaching our price target include failed or inconclusive clinical trials, the inability of the company to secure adequate funding to progress its products through the development pathway or the occurrence of dilutive capital raises, lack of commercial success, and delisting risk.
